Ecclesiastes 4:9 (NIrV)

Two people are better than one.

They can help

each other in everything

they do.

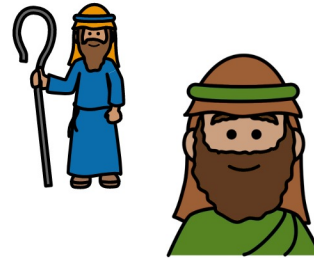

KC March 9 2025 Pg. 2

As the Israelites traveled into the wilderness, a group of people called the Amalekites came out to attack them.

God's people had no experience in fighting battles.

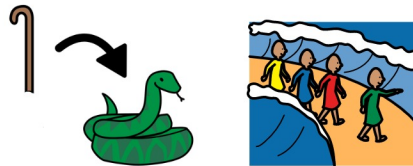

Moses appointed a man named Joshua to lead the army.

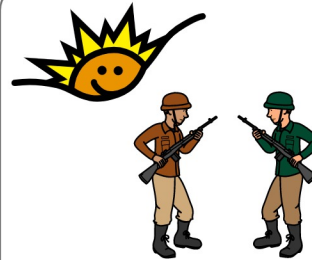

Moses said to Joshua, "Choose some of our men, then go out and fight against the Amalekites."

Tomorrow, I will stand on top of the hill, holding the walking stick God gave me."

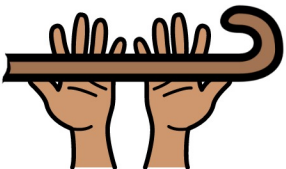

Moses' walking stick was special. God had once turned it into a snake, and back again. God also told Moses to raise it up high to part the Red Sea.

When morning came, the 2 armies met on the field of battle while Moses, his brother Aaron, and their friend Hur stood atop a nearby hill.

Moses raised his hands with the staff and the battle went well for God's people.

But as Moses grew tired and lowered his arms,

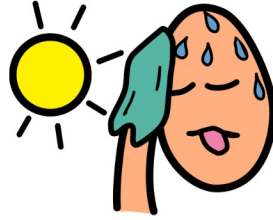

the Israelites had a bad time.

KC March 9 2025 Pg. 3

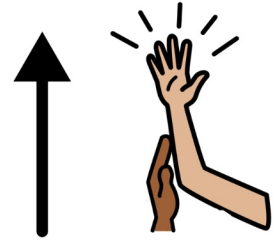

Moses put his arms right back up in the air, and the Israelites began to win again.

As the battle continued through the heat of the day, it became harder for Moses to keep his hands up.

Aaron and Hur found a large rock for Moses to sit on, then they stood alongside him and held his hands up for him.

Once again, the battle went well for God's people.

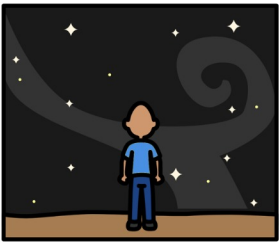

By the end of the day, God's people defeated the Amalekites.

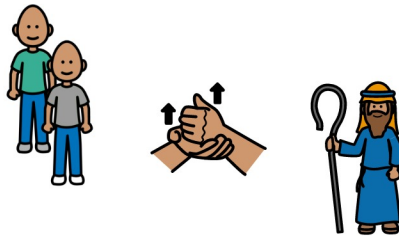

God gave Moses a way to help the Israelites by raising his arms up high.

But Moses couldn't do it alone,

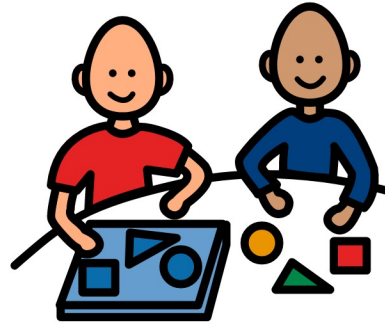

instead, Aaron and Hur worked together to help Moses and all of God's people win the battle.
