The Egyptian Pharaoh was worried that there were too many Israelites.

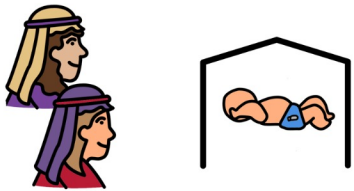

The Egyptians enslaved the Israelites (or Hebrews) and forced them to do hard work.

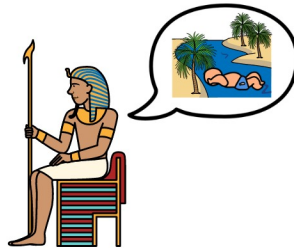

The Israelites kept growing in number, so Pharaoh came up with a terrible plan.

He called 2 Israelite midwives - Shifrah and Puah. He told them to get rid of the baby boys and keep the baby girls.

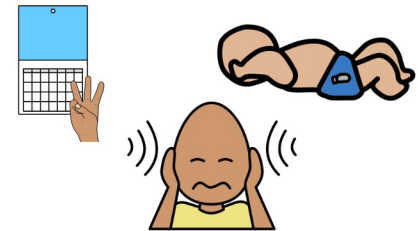

The midwives had respect for God, and kept the baby boys safe.

So, Pharaoh gave a new order - Every Hebrew baby boy was to be thrown into the Nile River.

Soon after, a man named Amram and his wife, Jochebed had a baby boy. Along with baby and big sister, Miriam, they were determined to keep the baby safe.

They were able to hide the baby for 3 months. But he was getting bigger and louder.

Jochebed made a basket and placed the baby in the basket.

Jochebed and Miriam set the basket in the tall grass along the river. Miriam hid close by to make sure her brother stayed safe.

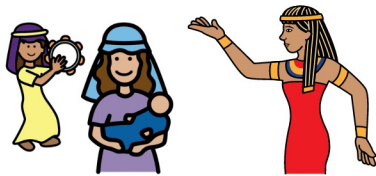

The Princess, Pharaoh's daughter came down to the Nile River to take a bath.

She heard the baby crying and asked one of her attendants to bring her the basket. She knew this was a Hebrew baby.

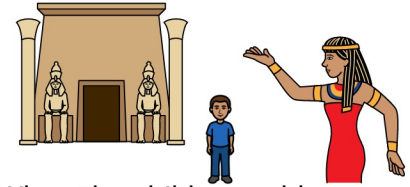

Miriam saw everything and knew she had to act quickly. She ran out of her hiding place.

Miriam asked Pharaoh's daughter if she'd like her to get a Hebrew woman to nurse the baby and ran to get her mother.

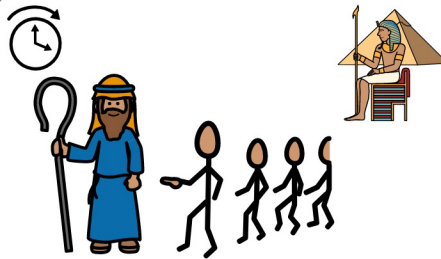

Jochebed was able to take care of her child and know he will be safe.

When the child was older, Jochebed took him to Pharaoh's daughter. The Princess named him Moses and raised him as her son.

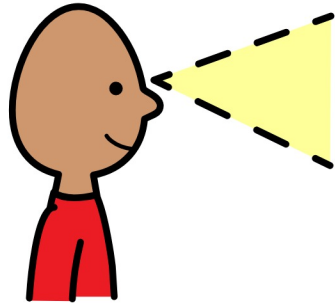

Thanks to the care and quick thinking of Jochebed and Miriam, baby Moses was saved.

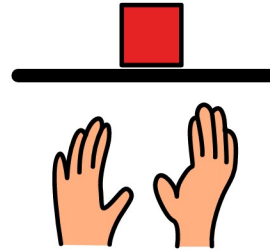

Many years later, God used Moses to lead the Israelites out of Egypt.
