Philippians 2:5 (NIRV)

As you deal with one another,

you should think

and act

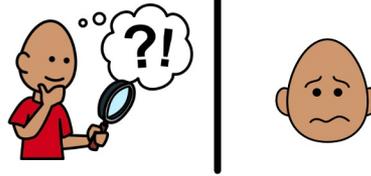

as Jesus did.

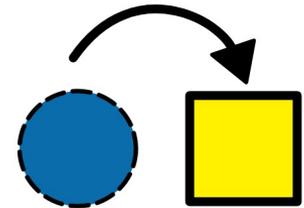

How can we look out for one another?

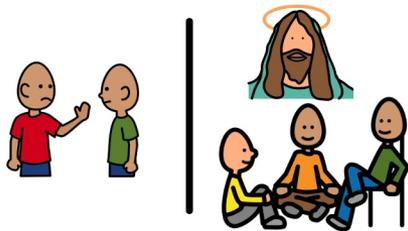

In Luke, we read about the amazing things Jesus did and the way crowds of people started to follow Him everywhere.

At first, the religious leaders were simply curious about Jesus. But soon, they got worried.

Jesus was changing the way they had always done things and making surprising claims.

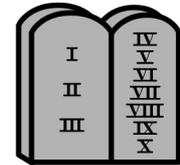

Jesus also spent time with people the religious leaders avoided.

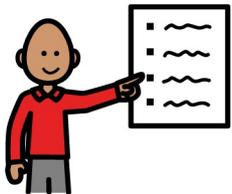

Jesus cared more about people's needs than about keeping up with appearances.

Jesus allowed his disciples to eat and pick grain on the Sabbath, a day of rest.

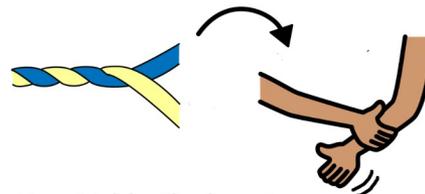

The religious leaders were talking about the special laws that God had given the Israelites when Moses led them out of Egypt.

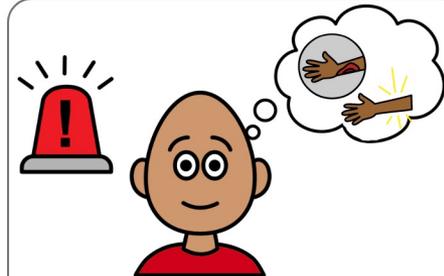

The religious leaders began to put more rules on the Sabbath. Those extra rules were not from God.

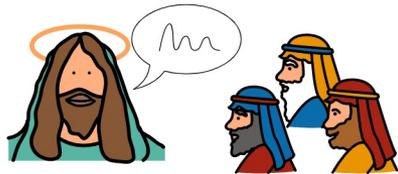

Instead of making the Sabbath more restful, it made it more stressful for most people.

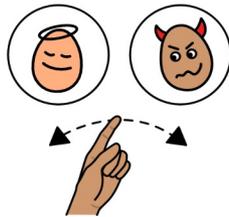

One Sabbath day, Jesus entered his synagogue and began to preach. In the crowd sat a man with a weak, twisted hand.

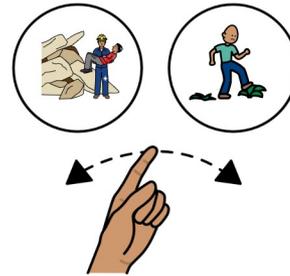

Right away, the religious leaders went on high alert.

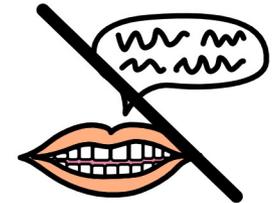

Jesus knew right away what the religious leaders were thinking. Jesus confronted the religious leaders.

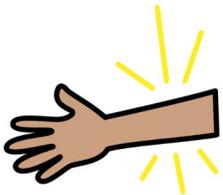

Jesus said: "What does the law say we should do on the Sabbath? Should we do good or should we do evil?"

Should we save a life or should we destroy it?"

No one answered.

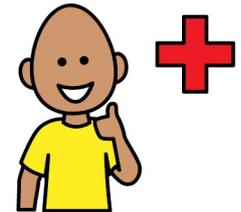

Jesus spoke to the man with the twisted hand and told him to stretch out his hand. The man reached out and his hand became as good as new.

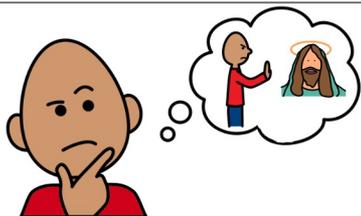

The religious leaders did not celebrate along with everyone. They got very angry.

Jesus had not broken God's law about the Sabbath, but He chose to ignore the extra rules made by the religious leaders in order to care for a man that was hurting and to make him well.

The religious leaders cared more about rules than about helping people, so they started plotting how to stop Jesus.

Jesus never let what others thought control His actions.

He demonstrated for us all what Paul wrote to the Philippians,

"None of you should look out for your own good, each of you should also look out for the good of others."
